

Incident report

Entry of Khadim Hussain Khursheed Alazahri, a hate preacher, in to the UK

In August 2018, Khadim Hussain Khursheed Alazahri, a hate preacher who encouraged violence against the Ahmadiyya Muslim community in Pakistan after the devastating attacks on a historical Mosque of the community is Sialkot in May, was allowed entry to the UK for a conference being held in Luton.

By way of background, on the 23 May 2018, a large mob of around 35 workers of the Municipal Committee (local authority) of Sialkot attacked a local house belonging to a member of the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community. Workers raided the home where they started to demolish the property from the upper floor, working their way down. The property was targeted due to its historical significance and links to the founder of the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community.

The attacks were instigated by Cleric Hafiz Hamid Raza who can be heard in footage of the attack inciting the destruction of the Mosque. Hamid Raza was the keynote speaker at the Khatme Nabuwat conference in 2014 in Derby UK.

Crucially, following the attack, extremist cleric, Khadim Hussain Khursheed Alazahri has called on the commissioner of the region to orchestrate similar attacks on all other buildings belonging to the Community in Sialkot¹.

He was allowed entry to the UK for a religious conference taking place in Luton on the 5 August 2018.
